

Journal of Pharmacy and Pharmacology: Licence to Publish

In order to ensure the widest dissemination and protection of material published in the journal, we ask authors to issue Pharmaceutical Press with a licence to publish their article.

If copyright is held by your employer, you must obtain your employer's written authority to grant an exclusive license, or ask them to sign this form. If you are a Government employee you must obtain authority to grant a non-exclusive worldwide licence to publish in any media and exploit all subsidiary rights.

Manuscript Reference Number: _____

Title: _____

- 1) By signing this form, you (the author(s) or copyright holder) agree to grant to us (the publisher) for the full period of copyright, including any renewals or extensions and in all languages, an exclusive licence (or non-exclusive in the case of government employees) to publish your article worldwide in printed, electronic or any other medium, and to exploit all subsidiary rights in the contribution. You agree that we may publish your article in the above named journal, and that we may sell or distribute it within the journal, on its own, or with other related material owned solely or jointly by the publisher.
- 2) You warrant that the article is your original work, has not previously been published in whole or substantial part, is not currently under consideration by another journal, does not infringe the intellectual property rights of any other person or entity, and cannot be construed as plagiarising any other published work. You confirm that you are the copyright owners of the contribution or have been expressly authorised by the copyright owner to grant this licence.
- 3) If the article contains material which is someone else's copyright, you warrant that you have obtained the unrestricted permission of the copyright owner, that you have provided written evidence of this and that this material is clearly identified and acknowledged within the article.
- 4) You warrant that the article does not, to the best of your knowledge, contain anything that is abusive, defamatory, libellous, illegal, obscene, fraudulent, nor in any way infringes the rights of others.
- 5) You warrant that, wherever possible and appropriate, any patient, client or participant in any research or clinical experiment or study who may be identified in the article has given informed written consent to the inclusion of material pertaining to them.
- 6) Your warrant that original research work involving the use of animal or human subjects fully complies with local, national, ethical and regulatory guidelines and that you have received formal documented approval from an appropriate institutional committee where necessary.
- 7) You warrant that you have included in the text of the article appropriate warnings concerning any particular hazards that may be involved in carrying out experiments or procedures described in the article or involved in instructions, materials or formulae in the article, and shall mention explicitly relevant safety precautions, and give, if an accepted code of practice is relevant, a reference to the standard or code.

- 8) You warrant that you have included in the text of the article an appropriate statement should you have a financial interest or benefit arising from the direct applications of your research, and that you have acknowledged any sources of funding for your research.
- 9) You consent to the inclusion of electronic links from the article to third party material, wherever it may be located.
- 10) You agree that in the event that the publisher sells the whole or part of its business to any third party the licence contained herein shall be assigned to that third party.
- 11) We promise that we will respect your rights as the author(s). That is, we will ensure that your name(s) is/are always clearly associated with the article, and while we reserve the right to make such editorial changes as may be necessary to make the article suitable for publication, we will make every effort to consult with the author(s) if we make any substantial change to your article. We reserve the right not to proceed with publication of your article for whatever reason.
- 12) Copyright remains yours, and we will acknowledge this in the copyright line that appears on your article. However, you authorise us to act on your behalf and at our expense to defend your copyright if anyone should infringe it, and to retain half of any damages awarded, after deducting our costs. You retain rights for non-commercial use of the article as set out below, providing that when reproducing the article or extracts from it you acknowledge first publication in Journal of Pharmacy and Pharmacology and provide a full reference or web link as appropriate. These are personal rights and cannot be transferred.
- 13) This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of England and the jurisdiction of the Courts of England and Wales.

The rights that you personally retain as the author(s)

- 1) The right to be identified as the author(s) of your article whenever and wherever the article is published.
- 2) Patent rights, trademark rights, or rights to any process, product or procedure described in your article.
- 3) The right to share with colleagues for personal or professional (non-commercial) use print or electronic 'preprints' of your unpublished article (i.e. the version of the article prior to peer review) or to post a preprint on your own website, your institution or company's intranet, or within the internal institutional repository of your institution or company for which no charge for access is made. Following publication, this preprint version should be updated with an acknowledgement of publication in Journal of Pharmacy and Pharmacology and an appropriate web link.
- 4) The right to post immediately upon publication in the journal the final peer reviewed version of your article (i.e. the author's final accepted manuscript and not the publisher-created PDF, HTML or XML version) on your own website, your institution or company's intranet, or within the internal repository of your institution or company for which no charge for access is made. This version should contain an acknowledgement of prior publication in Journal of Pharmacy and Pharmacology and an appropriate web link.
- 5) The right to post after an embargo period of 12 months following publication in the journal the final peer reviewed version of your article (i.e. the author's final accepted manuscript and not the publisher-created PDF, HTML or XML version) within an external subject repository, but not for commercial sale or for any systematic external distribution by a third party. This version should contain an acknowledgement of prior publication in Journal of Pharmacy and Pharmacology and an appropriate web link.
- 6) The right to share with colleagues a reasonable number of copies of your article in its published form as an electronic or printed offprint or reprint, for personal or professional (non-commercial) use.
- 7) The right to make printed copies of all or part of your article for use by you for lecture or classroom purposes or for in-house training programmes of your employer, provided that such copies are not offered for sale.
- 8) The right to include your article in a thesis or dissertation that is not to be published commercially provided that you acknowledge prior publication in the journal.
- 9) The right to use all or part of your article in personal compilations or other publications of your own articles.
- 10) The right to expand your article into book forms for publication or publish all or part of the material from your published article in a book written or edited by the author(s), provided that you acknowledge prior publication in the journal.
- 11) The right to use selected figures, tables and text (up to 250 words) from your article within another work written by the author(s) that is made part of an edited work published by a third party.
